AUTOMATIC TORTILLA FALAFEL & KEBAB MACHINES

A vertical rotisserie machine, likely used for shawarma, is shown. The machine is made of stainless steel and features a large, vertical skewer of cooked meat, possibly chicken or lamb, which is being rotated. The meat is layered and has a golden-brown, slightly charred appearance. At the top of the skewer, there are fresh vegetables, including green leafy lettuce and red tomatoes. The machine is mounted on a stainless steel base with a perforated metal tray. The background is dark, making the machine stand out.

SHAWARMA MACHINES

Cutter robot slides on a vertical rail, hanging from the top of a gallows in front of the shawarma up and down. It automatically cuts the meat into thin slices using integrated optical sensors without any human intervention. A heat sensor ensures that the meat is cooked. The robot is operated via a touch screen and is available in several versions for shawarma skewers of various sizes. In addition to the purely electrical version, there are also versions in which the grill unit is gas-powered.
